[redacted] Smith showed agents two carbon copies of checks, one made in the amount of twenty-eight-hundred dollars, and the other in the amount of five-thousand dollars. Both checks reflected the name, [redacted] in the memo portion of the check. The check for twenty-eight-hundred dollars was written on an Bank Of America check, #1524, and dated "7/7/00 (probably meant to be 6/7/00)." The check for five-thousand dollars was written on a Bank Of America check, #1472, and dated, "4/11/2000." The check also indicated, "Loan [redacted]"

After Smith finished describing her relationship with [redacted] agents told her that they were investigating allegations that she had planned to kill Pierce Marshall. Smith began crying and denied ever making such plans and blaming [redacted] for making up the story. Smith then asked if [redacted] had made those allegations about her. SA [redacted] responded that they could not divulge their source of the allegations, and that they were conducting an investigation to verify the allegations.

Smith said she was a party in a civil suit in Texas involving Pierce Marshall and his family's trust. Marshall lives in Texas and is the trustee of the trust. Smith explained that she was married to Marshall's father, Howard Marshall, in 1995. Howard Marshall died about a year later, and she was suing Marshall for money owed to her by the trust. Smith never thought about killing Marshall, and explained that it would not be logical for her to want Marshall killed as the law suit would soon be finished by September 2000. Smith said killing Marshall would not make sense since the trust would still exist. Smith adamantly denied ever contemplating such a crime and believed [redacted] made up the story because he was angry with her for severing their relationship.
